Tatum Hayes Perez is an accomplished attorney in the Tax and Corporate Law practice groups at Greenspoon Marder LLP, where she provides comprehensive legal counsel to individuals and businesses navigating complex federal tax issues. With expertise in tax law, cannabis regulation, corporate governance, and business structuring, Ms. Perez is well-versed in managing tax audits, resolving tax debt matters, and advising on strategic corporate transactions. She works with clients across the nation, with a strong presence in Colorado and Florida, helping with both state-specific and federal tax compliance and planning.

Ms. Perez' legal practice spans a broad array of federal tax matters, including tax planning, audits, IRS representation, and ensuring regulatory compliance for businesses of all sizes. Her knowledge of cannabis law allows her to guide clients in the rapidly evolving legal landscape, especially as it intersects with federal and state tax requirements. She also regularly advises business owners, investors, and companies on structuring, corporate governance, and navigating complex regulatory environments to optimize tax strategies and minimize liabilities.

A recognized leader in her field, Tatum earned both her J.D. and LL.M. in Taxation from the University of Denver Sturm College of Law, where she was honored as a Tillman Scholar. Her deep understanding of federal tax law, combined with her hands-on experience in both corporate law and regulatory compliance, enables her to deliver strategic solutions tailored to the unique needs of her clients.

Beyond her legal practice, Ms. Perez is the founder of a leadership and organizational development consulting business, the Director of Operations and Finance for a nonprofit foundation, and an adjunct faculty member at the University of Denver. With her nationwide client base, Tatum is a trusted advisor committed to helping individuals and businesses navigate the complexities of federal tax law.
