William Tucker is an associate in the Litigation practice group at Greenspoon Marder. His practice focuses on probate litigation, including litigation arising from estates, trusts and contested guardianships, as well as complex commercial and real estate litigation. Mr. Tucker's clients have included estate and trust beneficiaries, personal representatives, trustees, financial institutions, shareholders, partnerships, corporations, real estate developers and investors, real estate brokers, and other business entities. Mr. Tucker counsels his litigation clients on an array of matters, including estate and trust disputes, contested guardianship proceedings, business disputes, injunctive suits, alternative entity litigation, contract claims, securities and compliance issues with federal and state regulatory schemes.

Mr. Tucker is positioned to advise his clients undergoing review of their compliance with financial regulations at the federal and state level because he worked within the financial sector prior to obtaining his law degree, gaining in-depth knowledge with capital markets. He has also represented clients in courts across the country in matters related to the Telephone Consumer Protection Act, Federal Trade Commission proceedings, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.
